When you file a personal injury claim, your attorney will inform you whether your case will likely settle or go to trial. Around 95 percent of cases settle before trial. Settlement happens when the insurance company for the defendant, or a defendant, offers a reasonable amount for the damages in the case which makes the risk of getting something more at trial difficult to predict.

Personal Injury and The Benefits of Litigating a Claim
The law on claiming for a psychiatric injury isn't as simple as making a claim for a physical personal injury. There are legal grey areas around psychiatric injury claims as you will need to have evidence that proves the injury was as a result of the accident or negligence.
