I learned this method from $50 Knife Shop by Wayne Goddard. Instead of dropping the heated knife into the quenching medium tip first, submerging the entire knife, the edge quench involves submerging one third to one half of the blade's width (cutting edge first) into the quenching medium. A regulator block is used to hold the blade at the ...

Heat Treating Knives : 7 Steps - Instructables

Wayne Goddard recommends leaving the surface with a 400-grit finish before patina. Thus far, that has worked fine for me. If your knife has a higher-grit finish, such as 800 or 1,000, give it a light rub with some 600 grit wet/dry sandpaper. a. sand the blade in one direction, going from ricasso/handle to the tip.
